At the heart of e-Government

Genis' information solution for the Register of Civil Status (RCS) provides the Slovenian government administration with a powerful foundation for realizing the potential of e-business.

[e-Government]

RCS is key source of data for the CPR which is pivotal to supporting e-Government. Together, these registers provide fast and efficient access to data concerning all known residents, which enables government administration to provide timely and relevant information when responding to enquiries by citizens.

Total e-business for civil registers

The RCS provides electronic access to civil data and for conducting e-business with the government administration. The solution contains data concerning the personal status of citizens of Republic of Slovenia from birth to death. It enables maintenance of personal status of citizens in accordance with all legal requirements.

   * Births
   * Fatherhood
   * Citizenship
   * Marital status
   * Divorce
   * Change of name
   * Adoption
   * Loss of legal capacity

For the citizens of the Republic of Slovenia, the RCS also includes events that occurred outside the state: birth, death and change of marital status. For foreign nationals, only events that occurred in Slovenia are maintained in the register.

Optimising the work of government administration

Genis' solution for the Register of Civil Status essentially improves procedures for reporting civil events, for example, from maternity hospitals, hospitals and the courts. Greater automated control means fewer mistakes than would occur during manual data entry. The increased processing also shortens the database refresh intervals for such information.

Linking multiple databases and automating procedures for electronic exchange facilitates the work of the administration registrar. The number of issued certificates from the register has been reduced, as individuals no longer need to personally present certificates in written format, thereby reducing the amount of paper documentation. Data is electronically available for administrative procedures as soon as a personal event is entered into the Register of Civil Status.

Convenience for citizens

Complete informatisation allows any citizen to access personal data and certificates at any administrative office or through electronic administrative services.
